

VoCare Litigation Support

Expert can mean many things.

It can mean someone who's a good observer. Or, maybe it's someone who's seen enough to have a credible opinion. Often it's someone who's worked at the edges of something for awhile, someone who knows what it takes to do the job.

But for the experts at VoCare Litigation Support, expert means so much more. Because if you're an expert with VoCare, you've been there to witness the pain and anguish of a severely or catastrophically injured individual. You've designed and implemented hundreds of life care plans detailing rehabilitation programs and future options – in fact, you've developed plans for individuals who seemingly have no options. You've managed the implementation and long-term results of the planning. And you've done it all sensitively, helpfully and cost effectively.

VoCare Litigation Support professionals are experts not because they've read it all or seen it all. They're experts because collectively they've experienced most of what comprises the world of the catastrophically and severely disabled.

VoCare's experts are often certified Rehabilitation Counselors whose opinions concerning employability, transferable skills, workplace accommodations and the financial impact of future rehabilitation are valued because of their depth of knowledge and breadth of experience. Our professionals have decades of experience, and they are court-acknowledged expert witnesses whose opinion is commonly employed in complex litigation.

Professional health care clinicians have been the management backbone of VoCare since it was founded. They bring the kind of expertise that comes with having delivered health care services in the real and demanding world of the severely disabled. They understand, first hand, standards of care issues. Their familiarity with the complex nature of personal injury and catastrophic disability cases make them uniquely qualified to help develop and organize appropriate medical information.

When there is a severe or catastrophically disabled individual, as the result of liability, the economic and compassionate care issues are immense and complex. Trust only real expertise, and real experience to help you deal with them.

Trust only VoCare.

Patient Care Experts for the Severely- and Catastrophically-disabled

When the unthinkable, unbearable happens. When someone close becomes severely or catastrophically injured or disabled. The world changes. Care is intense and seemingly forever. Costs are out of sight. And the health care system appears vast and seemingly difficult to navigate.

Yet, that person is suffering. Their life has changed – forever.

It's at times like these that the full value of VoCare Litigation Support becomes unmistakably clear. VoCare is compassionate clinicians – nurses, rehab specialists, and others – experts who understand care and costs, experts who demand that both be managed well and in tandem. Experts who will see that people in your charge, people you care about, receive the best possible care at a cost you can afford.

Litigation Experts for Complex Cases

Years of experience with a myriad of catastrophic and severely disabled cases has made each of VoCare's professionals an expert. Our experts testify in complex cases in all jurisdictions including Courts of Common Pleas, U.S. District Court, and U.S. Court of Claims relating to social security, workers' compensation and insurance claims. We provide assistance in cases involving serious and catastrophic personal injury, commercial casualty product liability, and medical malpractice.

Our expert opinions are particularly useful in cases involving:

- Residual or lost employment
- Wage earning capacity
- Rehabilitation options
- Life Care Plans (cost of future care)
- Standards of care

We understand the complex issues and nuance of litigation in this area. We call the case, uncompromisingly, as we see it. But for attorneys with a case, we're powerful advisors.
